

From the Editor

The production of scientific knowledge today extends beyond generating empirical findings; it also involves interpreting this knowledge meaningfully and translating it into insights that can inform human experience and social practice. With this perspective, the PsyCraft Journal (Psychology & Craft Journal) is launched as an international peer-reviewed academic journal dedicated to bringing together theoretical foundations, empirical research, and creative applications within the field of psychology.

PsyCraft Journal aims to provide a scholarly platform that integrates psychological theory with practice, innovation, and interdisciplinary perspectives. The journal welcomes original research conducted through quantitative, qualitative, and mixed-methods designs, as well as studies on scale development, systematic reviews, and bibliometric analyses. Our primary objective is to contribute to the advancement of psychological science by publishing high-quality studies that adhere to ethical principles, methodological rigor, and transparent peer-review processes.

The inaugural issue of PsyCraft Journal presents a diverse collection of studies addressing both contemporary and foundational topics in psychology. The articles in this issue examine themes such as peer bullying and communication skills, cognitive flexibility and personality traits, psychological resilience, career adaptability, bibliometric mapping of psychological constructs, and romantic loneliness. Together, these contributions reflect the journal's commitment to methodological diversity, conceptual depth, and practical relevance.

We believe that the breadth of topics and approaches represented in this first issue illustrates PsyCraft Journal's inclusive and multidimensional publication policy. By fostering dialogue between research and practice, and by encouraging interdisciplinary engagement, the journal aims to support researchers, practitioners, and policymakers in their efforts to gain a deeper understanding of psychological processes across individual, social, and cultural contexts.

I want to express my sincere appreciation to all authors who entrusted their work to the first issue of PsyCraft Journal, as well as to the reviewers and editorial board members whose careful evaluations and dedication ensured the academic quality of the published studies. Their contributions have been instrumental in shaping this inaugural issue.

PsyCraft Journal will serve as a reliable and inspiring academic platform that promotes high-quality scientific research, fosters international scholarly collaboration, and makes meaningful contributions to the global psychology literature. We look forward to welcoming future submissions and continuing this scholarly journey with our readers and contributors.

Sincerely,

Dr. Osman Söner
Editor-in-Chief
PsyCraft Journal